

Miss E. P. Bayley
June 2nd 1837
New York
19 Irving Place

My dear Miss Lowell,

I was unexpectedly detained a day longer in Boston by the mistake of a mantle maker, and I grieve to say I did forget that I had as it were appointed a meeting with you. But I did not probably think you would go - so I did not think to countermand it - as in one or two other instances - I can only say for excuse that I was very much confused at the last moment. But I am very glad to get the letters & very much obliged -

I found here when I arrived last night a letter from you - from Mr Snelling - & from John West. Solger himself. I cannot think that can be law anywhere for a person to perfect a route for which they have paid & all other taxes they have paid as the last ever since Dr S. died or was disabled. - No notice was ever served to her those two years - that she ever knew of - & of course she did not know of the advertisement Dr Solger had his life insured & the $2000 was paid her & she went straight to Mr Hooper & paid what he had advanced who had paid the bill before it was due in order to deliver her from the person who had sold the house & wanted to get it back again. This is a clear case of a swindling trick by some desperate rascal who takes advantage of her helplessness.

I have already written the whole account of the matter to a noble sympathizing young lawyer of Wash-ton - Marcellus Bailey - & begged him to go to her alone & see all about it - telling him how entirely every cent has been honorably paid that she knew was due & I feel sure she will be righted -

I do not know whether you know that the first $1000 paid on that house was borrowed from some men - Germans I believe principally - whom Dr Solger obtained places as treasury clerks - & whom immediately when he was sick came to dupe him - & whom he kept all day by paying monthly all the salary which she received ~~getting~~ the rest of her living by the boarders & her French scholars, & she ~~promised~~ promised them she would pay all if they would not torment him. She has continued to pay ever since by these an-statements & lately told me she had still three hundred dollar to pay. - She is therefore without means to buy off this man & he ought not to be tor-off. - He says now her French lessons stop & her boarders diminish for the summer. - But she had just received a letter from me in which I spoke as usual a great deal of her husband & she says that has comforted her so much (the sympathy) that she feels calmer - & she sent to her lawyer to see if he would not adjust it. I do not know his name or character & so I have asked Mr Bailey to go & see about it. He will do all that can be done & I have written to her that I have done so. -

Mr. Dana is perfectly friendly to Mrs. Tolpe - & perfectly sincere subsequently - but I must tell you that she is not reliable being a victim of epileptic fits & always in a state of insanity. I thought you perhaps of derangement - Should you ever see & talk with her you would perceive that this is old & I happen to know it - so do Mrs Solger - who discovered her insanity by her own observation before Prof was told of it by me with its cause. I do not doubt however that there is something very important in her report by Julius. I know he is utterly discontrollable by his mother - and by himself - so powerful is his temperament & so wholly un-disciplined as he has always been. Dr Solger had very false theories with respect to his duties as husband & father though the most pure & profound feelings - & he trusted too implicitly to circumstances to instruct the mind - & was too jealous of using her personal influence over their therapy.

Hence Mrs. Solger never knew the grounds of her Protestant faith but only her anti-catholicism & the children had no clear ideas of duty given to them.
Julius needed this especially being passionate rather than intellectual & poor Mrs Solger has neither the comforts of Protestant or Catholic religion & realises nothing in the Universe greater than her own broken heart - which is to me such a testimony to the reality of the God who is Love. I have written to Mrs. Sol-ger that we love all - you - Mrs. Snelling & all her friends - & all rumours of her dangerous condition & we think that some place must be found where he can go & be educated feeling the control over him of a strong will & loving his mind trained to self discipline or he will be ruined, and that no money he can earn now should be put in competition with it I have therefore prepared her for any suggestion her friends may make - & I shall speak to Mrs Kapp about it - Dr Solger's German friend in New York - Mrs Solger will not be surprised at my advice to her about Julius because her faults are a common subject between us. He has a good heart & loves her as many another undutiful son loves his mother - but having no self control constantly dis-resses her. Mrs. Ripley is all but dead & Mrs Simmons can do nothing but nurture her & does not attempt it - having taken her to her house - while Elizabeth keeps the old nurse & has a family to board with her in which she is much interested - Julius needs a man to take care of him - I wish there were a Schneppenthal here

I suppose you have read that delightful life of Carl Ritter - by Gay - published by Scribner - as well as Lessings Life - If not you have a great treat in both

I have just got another heart breaking note from Mrs. Polger & now she has got $500 to earn & pay - for she still has 300 of those other debts. I trust she will not die. But such shocks as these are killing - I will enclose her note - When you see Mr Snellby show it to him & keep it for me if it should prove the last - Well - God reigns!
Yours truly E. P. Keating
